Cupboard to Creativity 2022

April Update.

Hi Everyone,

I hope you have been making the most of the long weekends we have been having — maybe you went travelling or camping, maybe it was for you, a chance to stop and relax and to catch up on some reading or a movie.

For me it has been busy, much of that with family, as well as delivering some household items to help a young lady who lost her unit in the recent floods in Lismore.

My heart goes out to all those who are continuing to pick up the pieces after such a horrible event — so much is still needed in all the communities that were affected.

I had the privilege of delivering quilts on that trip — some had been gifted through me and some I had made, and the Cupboard to Creativity challenge has been the starting point of some of these gifting quilts.

My April challenge is different in layout to the ideas proposed last month , as I ran out of the green fabric in the lattice part for the extra 4 blocks, so I created other blocks for the corners. My quilt will need to have extra added to it to lengthen for a gifting quilt, but I am happy with the centre.

I keep thinking of new ways to colour this block to use up more of the left overs (I have seen one started in a mixture of colours, so look forward to seeing that finished).

The design will possibly be one I revisit at some point.

I hope you have fun playing with the May challenge.

Stay safe and well &

Enjoy your Quilting.
