

Cupboard to Creativity 2020

June Update.

Hi Everyone,

I am rather excited this month to hear that Qld borders will open on 12 July (sadly not for those from Victoria until the spike in Covid19 cases is controlled).

The new stage of restrictions which allows more people in to small businesses also means we are good to go for all our groups now. I must say the new spacing for 8 in our quilt rooms has worked really well for us for the past 5-6weeks.

I have been focussing on getting an e-learning platform happening on my website in the past few weeks which means a whole new learning experience for me with video making and editing etc..... I have a lot to do before I can upload to the website and there has been many challenges and road blocks along the way. I will let you know when content starts happening.

Quilts for Comfort:

In the past month I have slowed down a little on the Quilts for Comfort as we have quite a collection ready to distribute, and my focus has been on other things:)

THANK YOU to all those still making quilts for gifting—there has been a number of people helping with some of the quilting this month, and I appreciate this help immensely.

June monthly border challenge — “Zig Zag or Changing Direction”

This month I didn't start thinking about what border I would do until I came to a roadblock with the video work I was doing..... I took time out from that and of course did some quilting to refocus, be creative, & feel like I was achieving something.....

After sewing the Zig Zag border I went back to the video work & sorted the problem:)

Here is my multi coloured border on the clowns quilt — the centre is a donated fabric piece and I will be adding a plain border then more pieced borders to this and it will be a Quilt for Comfort.

Have fun with the July theme.
