

Cupboard to Creativity 2020

September Update.

Hi Everyone,

September has been a fun month with warmer days and still cool nights.

I have had a lovely time creating my Celebration of Spring border. It came about by finding a bag of donated leftovers (from one of my night time group ladies) as I was deciding what to make. In the bag were lovely bright Kaffe Fassett floral fabrics which seemed to suit the theme.

I rummaged through the bag and found a whole collection of half rectangle triangles and decided to make a saw tooth style border. When I got to planning I decided a circular plan may suit them better, my thinking then was of a sun-flower so I found some bright yellow and blue to add to the triangles and set about planning my quilt.

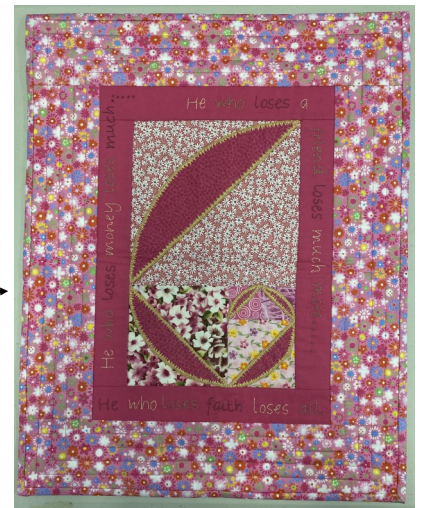

I have been busy this month creating more videos and I am hoping that I will be launching these over the next month.

I have created a video of the process of my circular quilt as I was making it and hope to be adding that to my website collection shortly.

I did finish my small sample from Aug and I am still adding applique sayings to the inner border of the larger one.

I have managed to finish a small pink Fibonacci quilt in the past month as well

Quilts for Comfort:

I am happy to report that the Life 2 retreat (for women after experiencing Domestic Violence) that was scheduled for March, after several change of dates is finally happening in early Oct and I have handed over 6 lovely quilts for those ladies to enjoy. Thank you to those who support this cause by gifting quilts.

Have fun working on your next challenge.

I look forward to seeing what you are doing.
