

Cupboard to Creativity 2023

January Update.

Hi Everyone,

This year is well under way — school is back, and the Xmas holidays a lovely memory. My group classes have resumed, and now my focus is on creating new projects for this year.

I also have many quilt tops from the previous few years that need to be quilted & bound and gifted on, so I plan to complete as many as I can throughout the year. I did manage to get 2 done in January (pictured below), and made a new serviette holder for our dining table at the farm.

For my Drunkard path unit, I have started creating a new quilt in Japanese fabric ready for a workshop in August, and have included the drunkard path unit creating a frame on the diagonal as something different.

When I start a new project I like to follow the Cupboard to Creativity challenge, which is all about using what is in your cupboards, drawers or boxes, and to also include the theme for the month to create interesting projects.

So, for this quilt I found a panel with the various printed designs, so started there.

I will be adding to the quilt over the coming weeks, and will share with you as it progresses.

I hope you had a productive month to start your year.

Happy quilting,

Jan P
