

Cupboard to Creativity 2023

May Update.

Hi Everyone,

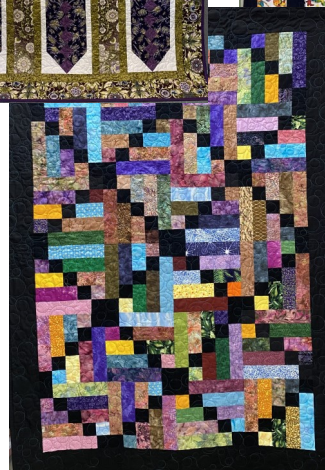

This past month I have been very busy and managed to finish the last 7 quilts ( pictured below) that I had quilted back in March.

It is always a good feeling to complete the projects ( and of course start new ones:)

For my May Challenge, I started out with the plan to make a larger gifting quilt, but decided part way through to make it smaller. →

I had used some floral fabrics with co-ordinating prints, and then decided to embellish with some stem stitch to outline the shapes more.

I had used traditional on-laid applique for the pinwheels and petal shapes. I had prepared more blocks before I changed plans, so they will become another project, maybe worked differently at some point.

I hope you had fun with May—lets see what June brings:)
